Reasons for Small-Sided Play

- To touch the soccer ball more often and become more skillful with it while making more quality decisions during the game. Increasing individual technical development through more opportunities to possess the soccer ball. Increasing tactical development, because the fewer players on the field, the less complicated the decision making.
- To teach them to be more physically efficient in the field space in which they are playing! (High intensity play with the ball versus long runs chasing after the ball)
- Maximize involved playing time in the game! (More opportunities to solve problems that only the game presents)
- They should have more opportunities to play on both sides of the ball! More exposure to both attacking and defending situations to enhance tactical awareness
- Because we want our young players to have more opportunities to score goals!
